

Lake Mamas & Babies

By Stan Tekiela

Beaver

A baby beaver is called a kit.

A beaver mother has up to eight kits each year. Beavers use sticks and mud to build lodges to live in. Kits live with their parents for several years, and they help fix up the lodge.

A Love of Wildlife Begins Here

Put learning in the hands of your youngest nature lovers. Introduce 10 baby critters (and their moms!) commonly found near lakes across North America. Beavers, frogs, eagles, and more, the animals presented here represent some of the most beloved lake wildlife.

Stan Tekiela is a naturalist, wildlife photographer, and the author of more than 190 books. He has received various national and regional awards for his books and photographs.
